SELECT MISCELLANY

The Lightning Rod Dispenser.
BY Wm. CALVERT.
If the weary world is willing, I've a little word to say
Of a lightning rod dispenser that dropped down on me one day.
With a poem in his motions, with a sermon
in his color,
With hands as white as lilies, and a face uncommon clean.
No wrinkle had his vestments, and his linen gleamed white,
And his nose constructed necktie was an interesting sight.
Which I almost wish his nose had composed a hangman's knot.
Ere he brought his sleek trimmed carriage for my woman folks to see.
And his ripsaw took a buzzin' for to goose a gash in me.
But I couldn't help but like him—as I always think I must.
So gold in my own doctrine in a fellow leap of dust;
When I fired my opinion at this very round by mouth.
They drew an answering volley of a very different sound;
I touched him on religion, and the hopes
my heart had known;
He said he had had experiences quite similar to my own.
Held him of the doubtin' that, made quick
my early years;
He had laid awake till morning with that some tried of fears.
I told him of my rough path I hoped to heaven to go;
He was on that very ladder, only just a round of feet.
I told him of my visions of the usefulness of gain;
He had seen the self same picture, though not quite so clear and plain.
Our politics was different, and at first he galled and winced;
But I aged him so, he was very soon
at ease.
An 'twas gettin' toward the middle of a hungry summer day;
There was dinner on the table, and I asked him would he stay.
And he sat him down amongst us, aver-
sant,
And asked a short, crisp blessing, almost
good enough to eat:
And gave the Lord Almighty a good first class recommend;
And for full an hour he listened to the mugger's counsel.
Talking like a blessed angel—talking like a blessed tramp.
My wife she liked the stranger, smiling on
his words and actions,
(I always doted a woman when her guests are on the eat.)
And he hinted that some ladies never lose their wits by dinner.
And he kissed her latest baby and received
it in his arms.
My sons and daughters liked him, for he had brought sweet news.
Aunt, showed the quilt of lace and gave
down the latest news;
And I couldn't help but like him, as I fore-wrote him.
I always must.
The gold of my own doctrine, in a fellowship of dust.
He was spreading desolation through a piece of apple pie.
When his paunch looked upon us with a tear in his fat eye.
And said "O, happy family I—your tis-sings make me sad.
A wife as sweet as this one: a babe as bright and fair;
A little girl with ringlets, like that one over there.
I worshipped them too blindly I—my eyes
with love were dim.
God took them to his own heart, and now I work to Him.
But had I not neglected the means within
my way,
Then they might still be living and loving
me to day.
"One night there came a tempest; the thunder peals were dire:
The child that tramped above us, was shooting bolts of fire
In my own house, I, lying, was thinking of my blame,
How little I had guarded against those shots of flame.
When crash I—through roof and ceiling the devil lightning came,
And killed my wife and children, and only
I was left.
Since that dread time, I've wandered, and ought for life have cared, Save to save other's loved ones, whose lives have yet been spared.

Since then, it is my mission, wherever I go, to save souls.
To sell to virtuous people, good lightning rods at cost;
With care and strong protection, I'll clothe your buildings o'er,
To save each separate lay, (perhaps a trade more).
What little else it comes to, at lowest price
I'll sell.
(Can signing the agreement, to pay no more per foot.)
I signified, while my family all approving stood about;
And dropped a tear upon it—but it didn't blot it out.
That very day with wagon came some men
both great and small.
They climbed upon my buildings as if they owned 'em all;
They heaved 'em and they heaved 'em much against my loud protest;
They trimmed 'em and they wired 'em,
and they trimmed and wired 'em still,
And every precious minute kept running up the hill.
My shirt got s'posed 's' seeking and I, mere
and rash and run;
He was supping with neighbor, just a three mile drive;
"Do you think," I fiercely shouted, "that I will send a mile o' wire"
"I'll send you fifty dollars," he cocked out his eye, "a commission fee."
Do you think to keep my building's safe from some uncertain harm.
I'm glad to deed you over all the balance of my farm."
He looked up quite satisfied, with a face devoid of guile.
And he pointed to the contract, with a smile but no pride.
It was the first occasion that he disagreed
with me;
But he held me to that paper with a firmness and so on;
And for that thunder story, ere the reason finally went,
I paid two hundred dollars, if I paid a single cent.
And now if any lightning's rodder wants a dinner dialogue
With a restaurant department of an enterprising man,
Let him sit his mill a rumble 'till inside
my outside gate.
And he'll be glad to see you, and he'll won't have long to wait.

MISS MEKKEER'S ESCAPE

The story of the Ute massacre as told by her.

Original cause of trouble.
AZARON, Oct. 29.—Mrs. Meeker, her daughter Josephine, and Mrs. Price and her children have been detained here two days on account of Mrs. Meeker's illness, caused by nervous reaction after a terrible journey of 500 miles on stages and indian ponies, bareback, and with poor advice on our mountain and small cañons.
During this period she was only half clad in a calico dress and a single shawl, was without blankets, and had only the bare ground to sleep on in the Indian camp. Miss Josephine Meeker was threatened with death. Her escape was narrow, and she says: The first I heard of any trouble with my Indians at my father's Agency was the firing at Mr. Price while he was playing for the Indian crops, according to Government instructions. The Indians had an idea and said that as soon as the land was plowed it would come to belong to the Utes.
Two or three journals were held, and an Indian woman, Jane, wife of Parvite, was the cause of the whole trouble. The trouble seemed to be settled by two or three councils. Secretly, however, the Utes were preparing for a massacre, for just before Josephine left with the Indians, a rumor was running up to the tent of Douglas with what I since learned was news of the soldiers fighting. Half an hour later twenty armed Indians came to the Agency from the camp of Douglas and began firing. The massacre began, and I was in the kitchen with my mother, watching the fire. It was after noon. I looked out of the window and saw the boys were working on the new building. Mrs. Price was at the door washing clothes. She rushed in and took Josephine, the baby, to my tent. We ran into the mill-room which only had one small window, and locked the door and hid under a shelf. The firing went on at intervals, for several hours.

There was no shouting, no noise, but frequent firing. We stayed in the mill-room until it began to fall with smoke.
The sun was half an hour high. I took Mrs. Price, three years old, and we all ran to my room. It was not disturbed. We kept the building would be burned, and ran across Douglas avenue to a field of sage brush beyond the plowed ground. The Utes were so busy stealing annuity goods that they did not see us at first. About thirty of them, headed with blankets, were carrying them toward Douglas' camp, near the river.
We had gone 100 yards from the Utes us. They threw down the blankets and came running towards us, firing as they came. The bullets whizzed at such a grasshopper around us. I do not think they intended to kill, only to frighten us.
A woman was shot by a bullet which went through her clothing and made a flesh wound three inches long. As the Indians came nearer they shouted, "We no shoot; come to us. I had a little girl, and an Indian named Pursue said for me to go with him. He and Josephine toward the river. An Uncpamphage Indian took Mrs. Price, and her baby and mother was taken to the headquarters of Douglas.
The Indian Pursue took me where his ponies were standing by the river and spotted me on a pile of blankets. The Indians were now on all sides. I could not escape.
The women was shot by a bullet which was at dusk and we started for the wilderness of the south. I rode on a horse with a sad, faded but no pride. The child was in behind me. Pursue and his son rode on each side of me, driving the pack mules ahead. About twenty other Indians were in the party. Mother came later, riding bareback behind Douglas, both on one horse, she was 64 years old, feeble in health, wounded, and not recovered from a broken thigh caused by a fall two years ago.

CHIEF ESCAPES.
Gave her neither horse, saddle, nor blanket.
We followed the river, and on the other side. Pursue brought me a half of meat to drink. We trod along until 9 o'clock, when we halted for the night. All the Indians dismounted, and blankets were spread upon the ground and I lay down to rest, with mother lying not far from me.
Chief Douglas was considerably excited and said that the next day General Adams and great emphasis. He related his grievances and explained why the massacre became. He said that through the fault of the Indians he was going to arrest the head chiefs, and Mrs. Price and her children were taken to the calaboose, and put them in there. He said his father had written all the letters to the Deputy and circled with reports about what the Indians would do, and was responsible for all the hostility against the Indians among the whites. While Douglas was telling this, he stood in front of me with gun, and his anger was dreadful. He said that father had always been writing to Washington. Then he swore a fearful oath in English, and said that if the soldiers had not come, and threatened the Indians with Fur Seal and the calaboose, and threatened to kill the other Indians at White river, the Agent would not have been massacred.
Then the brave chief, Douglas, who had seen at our table that very day, walked off a few feet, returned and placed his loaded gun to my forehead three times, and asked me if I was going to run away. I told him I was not afraid of him nor of death, and should not run away. When he found his repeated threats could not frighten me, all the other Indians laughed at him,
and made so much fun that he smoked off
and went over to frighten my mother.
All hands took a drink around my bed. Then they said that their horses and Pursue led my horse to me, and knelt down on his hands and knees for me to mount my horse from his back. We urged our horses forward, and journeyed on in the moonlight through the grand mountains, with the Indians talking in low tones among themselves. It was after midnight when we made a second halt in a deep and sombre cañon. Mother was not allowed to come up.

SAV GENERAL ADAMS
And his party outside on horses.
The squaw's movements attracted their attention, and they came up close. I pushed a squaw aside and walked out. They asked my name, and dismounted, and said that they had come to take us back if we cared to go. I showed them the tent where mother and Mrs. Price were stopping. On the next morning we left Uncpamphage in charge of Capt.
Cline and Mr. Sherman. To those gentlemen we were indebted for a safe and rapid journey to Duray's house on the Uncpamphage River, near Loa Pines. We rode on ponies forty miles the first three days, and reached Captain Cline's wagon, a small tributary of the Grande, where we took a buckboard wagon and traveled next day to the Grosventures and the next and last day of fear we traveled forty-five miles, reaching the house of the good chief Oury, about sundown. Here Inspector Pollock and my brother Ralph, met me, and I was happy enough to find my carriage on the floor and certain on the windows, lamps on the tables and stoves with fire. We were given the whole house, and after supper went to bed and slept without much fear, though mother was still haunted by the horrors she had passed through.
Next morning we breakfasted with Mrs. Oury who asked tears over us as she bade us "good bye." Then we took mail wagons and stages for home.
In closing this letter, I want to thank Chief Oury, his wife, and General Adams. To them we owe our escape.

The Idaho Enterprise. PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE ENTERPRISE PUBLISHING COMPANY, OFFICE, SEVENTH STREET, OGDEN, UTAH.

God guard our flag, and keep each star... Each stripe as bright as our pure hearts... Still make it lead our ranks in war... It shall lead through the darkest hour... Death to the traitor that would dare... To stain it through the blood of shame... All honest hearts its lot will share... And follow it to Death or Fame.

THURSDAY, NOV. 13, 1879.

Correspondence.

We receive correspondence from all parts of the country, and statistics of yields of crops, dairy produce, increase of herds, mining matters, and anything which would prove of interest to the reader after a knowledge of Idaho and her resources.

TIMBER CULTURE.

Referring to our article on depradations on the timber lands, we now refer to the circular of the Land Commissioner on the subject.

The U. S. District Attorneys have been charged with the duty of making presentation of persons against whom evidence could be obtained for timber depredations, and in some instances they have taken action. Several cases have occurred in this Territory, and the proofs seem so clear that there is little ground for a contest. At this juncture, however, the Government comes forward and says to those who have cut railroad ties, cordwood and...

For all railroad ties two and a half cents per cord.

For cordwood, fifty cents per cord. For logs, one dollar per thousand feet, board measure.

As a condition precedent to such settlement, each person seeking the same is required to prepare a full statement under oath, showing the time and place where the trespass was committed, the quantity of ties, logs, or wood by him taken or removed, and submit it to the local Land Office.

Should the proposition be accompanied by a statement that the trespasser or a part thereof, were committed on railroad lands, the fact must be conclusively shown that "all" the trespass was committed on such lands, otherwise no deductions for such reasons can be allowed.

But where criminal or civil suits have been instituted against the parties in interest, the foregoing conditions do not apply. The statements and proof will, however, be received by the Land Officers, and by them transmitted to the U. S. District Attorney having charge of the suits, accompanied by a copy of the circular instructions, and a report of the facts as supported by the evidence offered. Copies of all these papers will be simultaneously sent to the General Land Office.

In making the statement and proofs above named, it is not contemplated that timber for mining and domestic purposes shall be included.

Where a conflict of identity is involved as to the proper party or parties from whom the stumpage rates may be collected, and in all illegal cutting of ties, logs or wood upon Government lands, the same may be seized and held until the stumpage rates are paid, plus the cost of watching and caring for the property, to be liquidated by the parties seeking it. The local officers are further instructed to report all trespasses upon timber lands committed after the 17th June, 1879, which may come to their knowledge, in order that criminal proceedings may be instituted against such parties.

We think the action of the Government is more than liberal towards such offenders. It says, go, and sin no more, and instead of having prosecutions already pending, to go on, allows those inclined to compromise by paying a small proportion of their ill gotten gains. These facts being certified to the prosecuting officer, it is logical to infer that a "mole prosecution" would be entered. What more could be asked? It is a magnanimous act towards offenders, and would seem to be availed of with avidity.

Some, however, refuse to comply with these easy terms. Our suggestion to such is to now re-consider the matter, and act with regard to their usefulness as citizens, save time and money, for the law's delays are vexatious and costly.

One of their adverse arguments is that a jury would not convict upon such a charge. This is uncertain and dangerous ground. Juries are sworn to decide upon the evidence adduced, and in these times cases the notoriety of the premises and circumstances are in themselves convicting proofs.

One must also be given to the residents of those who are under oath to decide on the evidence before them.

Nor does the matter end in the verdict in a criminal action. A civil suit for damages may also be instituted against each trespasser, to recover the moneys received by them for lumber sold.

In one western court twenty nine civil suits were entered against trespassers. The jury returned verdicts in nineteen cases in favor of the Government for the value of the timber, in six others demurrals to complaints were overruled with leave to answer three were too late for the term, and one was continued on motion of the U. S. District Attorney. Twenty five indictments were found by the Grand jury, one conviction was had; pleas of guilty were entered in three cases, and the remainder were transferred to the following term of Court.

In view of these facts it is reasonable to take the best method of settling such claims. None in our district have actually taken steps to clear up their accounts under the terms of the circular named, and we would be glad to think that all who have trespassed knowingly or carelessly, would take the same course, saving thereby much trouble and expense, and avoiding the reputation which they would attach to any one who permits themselves to be prosecuted against for having trespassed on the public domain.

Advice to young Ladies.

U. S. John Rustin gives the following advice to young ladies: "In order to investigate one's self, it is well to find out what one is now. Don't think vaguely about it. Take pen and paper and write down as accurate a description of yourself as is possible, and, if you dare not, find out why you dare not try and get strength of heart enough to look yourself in the face, mind as well as body. Always have two mirrors on your dressing table, and with proper care dress mind and body at the same time. Put your best intention to finding out what you are good for and what you can be made into. The more resolves not to be useless and the honest desire to help other people will, in the quietest and most delicate way, improve one's self. If all accomplishments should be considered as means of assisting others. In music get the voice disciplined and clear, and then only of necessary expression and effect will take care of themselves. So in drawing, learn to set down the right shape of anything and therein explain its character to another person, but if you try only to make showy drawings for praise, or pretty ones for amusement, your drawing will have little or no real interest for you and no educational power whatsoever. Resolve to do every day something useful in the vulgar sense. Learn the economy of the kitchen; the good and bad qualities of every common article of food, and the simplest and best modes of their preparation; help poorer families in their cooking, showing them how to make as much of everything as possible, and how to make little things; coaxing and tempting them into tidy and pretty ways, and pleading for well folded table cloths, however coarse, and for a flower or two out of the garden to give on them. One should at the end of every day be able to say, as proudly as any peasant, that he has not eaten the bread of idleness. Get quit of the absurd idea that heaven will interfere to correct greater wrong while allowing its laws to take their own course in punishing small ones. If food is carelessly prepared, no one expects Providence to make it palatable neither, if through years of folly you misguide your own life, need you expect divine interference to bring you divine intercession at last for the best. I tell you positively the world is not so constituted. The consequences of great mistakes are just as sure as those of small ones, and the happiness of your whole life, and of all the lives over which you have power, depends as literally on your common sense and discretion as the excellence and order of the feast if a day."

Girls on the Diamond.

The Orville "Mercury" says that the girls attending the public schools at that place have organized two base ball clubs, called the Orville Dianas, first and second nines. It gives the names and playing positions, and thus reports the first match: "Man to the bat!" screamed the umpire. "Now I won't play at all, if you are going to call me Ham-fist," replied the striker. After a little coaxing she changed her mind and picked up the bat. "Gimme a fair ball!" was her admonition to the pitcher. Twenty-three balls were passed and she never hit one. The catcher scooped them in very gracefully with an old straw hat then the pitcher held the bat perfectly still, and the pitcher hit it with the ball, which rolled about ten yards on the ground and stopped. "Fan!" "Look out for your shoe string!" "Yea, you've spoiled my union!" "Catch it if 'Oh my toe!" "Put her out!" "Don't step on that bat!" "Who-o-o-o!" "Tant tant!" "Oh, you're holding!" "I won't play!" And they all rushed pell-mell to the first base, where the striker was nursing one of her feet and looking at a big hole on one side of her shoe, caused by stumbling over a rock. The members of both nines were so intent on being the first to put out the striker that they failed to realize whether they were going. The result was the worst mix-up you ever saw. A load of hoop poles and tin shop scraps wouldn't be a circumstance compared to it. For a few seconds it looked as though an earthquake had turned a dry goods store inside out and spilled a case of shoes over the pile. When they got well straightened out, the players discovered that a small boy had run away with the ball, and—just then the bell rang, putting an end to the sport.

Sad Effect of Sudden Joy.

A telegraph clerk's wife had for some time been in falling health. She went, by advice of physicians, to spend the summer in a farm house in Normandy, where boarders were taken. She wrote her husband almost daily, and gave favorable bulletins of her health. Recently he received a letter bearing the postmark of the village where she was staying. It was written by a neighbor. It announced the wife's death. The husband swooned away, fell into an armchair and was completely stunned by the blow. This stupor lasted three or four hours. He was aroused from it by his door-bell. He opened the door. His wife, the very picture of health, stood before him. His surprise and joy were too sudden—too great. He muttered incoherent phrases, hysterically laughed and sobbed alternately. He was insane. His physicians fear his death will speedily follow.

The Idaho Enterprise.

THURSDAY, NOV. 13, 1879.

The Enterprise is for sale at the well-known store of Clutter & Dodge, at the Terminus of the Utah & Northern Railroad, and at Mr. Alexander's News Agency, in the post-office building, Ogden.

Local Notes. Mr. J. A. Straight takes editorial charge and management of the Enterprise from this issue.

We ask a continuance of the kind feelings and actions which have been so freely extended to us since our advent in Oxford.

Hon. J. T. Morgan, Chief Justice of Idaho, arrived in town on Sunday last, and together with his family, has taken his abode at Capt. Finney's hotel.

Hon. George Ainslee, Delegate to Congress, has been sojourning in the city of Oxford during the week. He is on his way to Washington.

We were quite hospitably entertained at the "Logan House," where we had an interesting sermon on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week.

Rev. M. B. Hyde, pastor of the M. E. church at Ogden, delivered two very interesting sermons on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week.

Cohn & Hurst opened their fine billiard hall on Monday night last and the balls have been kept clicking ever since.

Dr. Sherman, of Malad, is in the city to perform a surgical operation upon James Anderson.

Mr. Charles Croushaw is still working at his dwelling and will finish it this winter, if possible.

This notice of F. Auerbach & Bro.'s advertisement. They have one of the finest and largest stocks of goods to be found in Salt Lake City.

Mrs. Campbell, maternal parent of Mrs. C. H. Fox, who has been ill at the "Hendley House," Ogden, has so far recovered as to be able to resume her journey to Washington, D. C.

Two children of Mr. James Hadley are being critically ill with fever. Another died on Sun. Monday from an attack of whooping cough which terminated in typhoid fever.

The Salmon City, Challis and Bonanza letters will appear very soon.

A gentleman who was trying to think of the word Universalist, but could not get hold of it at the moment, exclaimed: "Why, he is one of the desulphurizers!"

THE CHALLIS HOUSE. The tourist, miner, or capitalist visiting Challis, will confer a favor upon themselves by making a stopping place at the "Challis House."

The sale of the Bain wagons this year with them, has been larger than ever known in Utah; also the Oliver chilled plow. In fact the demand has been steadily increasing in all the branches of their trade.

Two men started out to see who could tell the biggest lie. No. 1 commenced: "A wealthy country editor"—No. 2 snarped him right there and paid the forfeit.

The man who undertook to lick a thousand postage stamps in a thousand minutes gave out on his seven hundredth lap. He says he had rather undertake to lick the Postmaster General.

Cleveland young women write comments on the margins of the literary novels they read. One emotional creature writes: "The pangs of love are grate; I have been there myself."

His name was Wrath, and when he asked his girl to marry him she gave him a soft answer, and a soft answer turned away Wrath.

An exchange wants to know why a woman always wants to sit on the floor to put her shoes on? "Why, because it is because she can't sit on the ceiling."

LOGAN, UTAH.

This is the largest town in northern Utah, the seat of justice of Cache county, and is exceedingly well located for health and other advantages.

It has about 4000 inhabitants, and lies upon a bench or high plateau, facing the south, and at the north side, and about the center east and west of the Cache Valley.

We remained over one day during the past week to take a look at this live young city, and while there called upon some of the leading business men.

Among the number we met who placed the Enterprise under obligations, was Mr. Goodwin of the firm of Goodwin Bros., wholesale and retail dealers in dry goods and groceries, who are doing a lively business we should judge from the looks of things thereabouts.

The drug business is well represented by Dr. O. G. Grunby, wholesale and retail druggist, whose advertisement appears in another column. The Dr. understands in how to reach an editor's heart, and also how to reach the public ear through the columns of a live newspaper.

Mr. J. H. Reed, who keeps a large and well selected stock of dry goods, clothing, boots and shoes, selling entirely by retail, is another live merchant.

We were quite hospitably entertained at the "Logan House," where we had an interesting sermon on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week.

 It's never too late to mend—an old pair of pants.
 Stialing horses is designated out West as equine embezzlement.
 People pick their teeth, and yet they do not all get good ones.
 Aphorism by a perfectly reckless belle—"Be flirtuous and you will be happy."
 Why don't somebody name a play "Porous Plaster?" It'd be sure to draw.
 Because soap comes in bars is no reason why it should be a bar to cleanliness.
 The Indian wears moccasins and has no cats, so he is just as well off without a bootjack as with one.
 A Vermont editor claims to have seen a rainbow at night, and the temperance people despair of him.
 When a man has nothing but a few broken teeth in his mouth, can he properly be styled a stump speaker?
 No matter remarks the Syracuse Herald, how much a candidate itches for office, he never likes to be scratched.
 A woman up in Scott county named her first baby "Pinafore." Because, probably, she "never" had one before.
 The boy with the gold watch wants to know what time it is twice as often as the boy with the silver chronometer.
 Woman continues enigmatical. When she gets hot she runs at her husband's nose, but when she gets cold she runs at her own.
 A gentleman who was asked for his marriage certificate quietly took his hat off and pointed to a bald spot. The evidence was conclusive.
 It is a mean man who would fool a fish by wearing a white choker and clerical coat when strolling along the banks of a brook on Sunday.
 Many a woman chews billiard chalk off her husband's coat, and a big tear stands in her eye as she thinks how late he works nights at his desk by the whitewashed wall.
 "It isn't the thinness of the milk I object to," said Job Shoutute, as he pulled out a small frog from the creamer, "it's the thickness of the water that it's mixed with."
 When the girl who has encouraged a young man for about two years suddenly turns around and tells him, she can never be more than a sister to him, he can, for the first time, see freckles on her nose.
